Here and There

Opening three weeks earlier this year with a 15-inch snow fall on December 2, the ski-ing season in Quebec province was off to a flying start with special Canadian Pacific trains as well as regulars crowded with enthusiasts on the first week-end thereafter from Montreal to the Laurentians.

The Empress of Britain will start the winter cruise season from New York December 29 on a nine-day voyage to the West Indies and Cuba. It will carry its own night club of Broadway entertainers and a smart dance band. The Empress of Australia, between January 7 and March 25 will make six cruises of eight, nine, ten, 16 and 18 day duration to the West Indies, all from New York.

Gift of a visit home for Christmas and New Year was the unusual present suggested for the year end by G. E. Carter, general passenger agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal, as he explained the company's pre-paid ticket plan for sending transportation to out-of-town relatives and friends. Arrangement of details of such visits is extremely simple, Mr. Carter said, and tickets cost no more despite use of telegraph in case of emergency and the guarantee that the tickets will reach the right person. This service is not confined to Christmas and New Year but is particularly popular at this season.

Canadian and world ski-ing enthusiasts will have an opportunity to test the Rocky Mountains' claim of having ski facilities equal to any when the Dominion championships of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association are held from March 1 to 4 on the steep slopes of 3,275-foot Mount Norquay, four miles from the Canadian Pacific Railway station at Banff.

According to announcement by Canadian Pacific Communications Department Christmas and New Year's practices of pre-arranged passage fares will be again available to the public this year. Within Eastern or within Western Canada they will be accepted at the low rate of 35 cents. Between eastern and western Canada and from points in eastern and western Canada to points in the U.S.A. they will be accepted at 40 cents. Rates are subject to governmental tax.

A gift to the Province of Ontario from the Kerry Hill Stock Society, in North Wales, ten ewes and one ram, of the world famous Kerry Hill sheep are now at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. The gift was arranged through W. Robert Davies, President and Editor of the Kingston "Windsor Standard," and the sheep, known in Wales as "speckle-faced rumpers," are expected to prove extremely popular with stock breeders across Canada. Experts consider the Kerry sheep an outstanding breed, and for their adaptability to any environment, and for their general utility.

Canadian Pacific semi-streamlined, air-conditioned trains which have been a feature of railway development this year, have had a big reaction on Christmas presents and are now being shown in many of the big department stores in the form of puppets. These miniature trains are having great success with the kiddies who are given rides in them in U.S. stores and then buy the puppets of the trains. They are also being used in the stores as window displays.

"Just Average Folks"

There are no mysterious "fifty big shots" crushing the debtors of Alberta.

The bond and mortgage holders of this Province are just average folks—just such neighbourly people as you deal with every day—people who have hoed their row successfully, put by a little savings from year to year and tried to invest these savings securely, thus creating nest eggs for their old age.

The $382,000,000 invested by life insurance companies in city and farm mortgages in Canada are the savings of 3,500,000 policyholders. In the same way, other hundreds of millions held in mortgages by loaning companies are the savings of scores of thousands of shareholders and debenture holders—$76,000,000 of mortgage holdings of one such company alone representing the savings of between fifty and sixty thousand persons of average means.

In Canada, it is the people of such average means who provide the funds which are invested in bonds and mortgages in Alberta and other provinces.

This statement is one of a series written by The Mortgage Loans Association of the Province of Alberta. The Association is composed of the world's contributors. It represents thousands of thousands of home investments by typical Canadians. Its loans to citizens of Alberta amount to some forty-five million dollars.

(The average statement is not only published, it is weekly)

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA GRAIG

He broke off abruptly. They had both become conscious of Michael's eyes following them. Michael's eyes held a gleam of jealousy as he viewed this intimate little scene between his wife and the man who once had been reported to be her lover.

They were back in the privacy of their own apartment, however, before Michael said a word. Then he burst out:

"I'm sorry we had to run into Marlowe tonight, Starr. I intended for you never to see him again."

Starr's face was strained. She had known subconsciously that it would be like this. All through their honeymoon in the country they had not mentioned Lance's name at all, as though by common consent. Michael had asked her nothing about the man. But she could not forget—Once, in that despairing mood, she had tacitly admitted to Michael that she had taken Lance Marlowe as her lover. That she had said it when she did for Michael's sake meant nothing now. If only she had not!

And now, because of Lance, after their long days of peace, they were in the midst of conflict again, tortured with memories which refused to be lived down.

It was so plain to Starr . . . Gossip linking her name with Lance's, her own voice crying out to Michael on that crazy night, telling him that she had been Lance's mistress, trying to make him hate her.

It was more than Starr could bear. She turned to her husband swiftly, pleadingly. Her voice raised.

"Michael, I've wanted to explain to you so many times, only some how I couldn't. There has never been anything between Lance and me—never! I lied to you. All of that awful time I was living a lie! Michael, you do believe me, don't you? You must believe me!"

Michael, looking down on her said: "Of course I do," pressing her small, cold hands very tightly in his big ones. "You're my wife, and I love you."

But there was a strange edge to his voice which chilled her, in spite of his words.

CHAPTER XVII.

Busy days again. Except for that slight undercurrent of an imperfect understanding which Starr felt as if she were a diving rod for Michael's moods, happy days. So much to be done. And, as always at such times, little chance to think.

Michael threw himself into business with a will, making up for lost time. He left it to Starr to hunt out their new home. She had about come to the determination that they should not live in an apartment house at all, but should take one of those attractive houses out in Forest Hills. So much more like a home, with an upstairs and down, your own lawn, and a lovely wistaria vine that would be a purple cloud in the summer time.

Michael made a little objection. It was so far away from business, he said. But with a witty concern for his health, Starr insisted that the drive into town each morning would be just the thing he needed. Perhaps he would not get any fresh air otherwise.

So it went, with most of their discussions at breakfast, at the luncheon downtown which Starr sometimes took with her husband, and during the placid evenings they spent together in the Egyptian living room with the Del-el-Bahari fresco. Life was perfect again—almost.

Then cataclysm. It was on a December morning not far from Christmas time when Starr received the first of the threatening letters.

She was seated across the breakfast table from Michael in the little alcove overlooking the shining East River when Sapphira came in with the morning mail. She handed it to Michael, who ran his eye through the letters and handed over an envelope addressed to Starr. It was addressed in a rough, unformed hand. Not to Mrs. Michael Fairbourne, but simply to Starr Ellison.

Michael laughed queerly as he glanced up at her, handing her the letter.

"I thought everybody knew that we were married. Better advise your friends, Starr."

That was ridiculous. Actually she had not a friend in the world, now that she had cut herself loose from those who had known her in the New England town, who probably had not the faintest idea she was still in the land of the living. No friends—only acquaintances. Like Lance, and Stephanie, and Banger, and perhaps Margorie Browning, and the rest of that fast-stepping crowd. Certainly they could not be called friends.

With a curious pang of fear that caught her breath in her throat, she slit the envelope. A half-strangled cry was forced back from her lips as the words stared at her. Then came Margorie plunged through her like a cold dagger.

On a single sheet of paper was written in that same unformed hand: "You cannot escape your fate. You and the man you love."

There was no signature, only a queer scrawl near the bottom of the page that may or may not have been neoteric writing. Starr did not know. She was in a daze. Then she became aware that Michael was saying sharply:

"What is it? What's the matter, Starr? Don't look like that!"

Somehow she pulled herself together, tried to smile with unconcern.

"It's nothing," she said, with too elaborate carelessness. "Nothing at all." But her lips shook, and her face was as white as the paper she held in her hand.

Michael's eyes seemed to be peering down into her very soul. He said sternly:

"Nonsense! There is something the matter. You look positively sick, Starr."

The note was crumpled in her nervous fingers. She stared at him in a stricken silence. Michael held out his hand. Masterful again.

"Starr, let me see that letter."

Her numbed lips moved, and in her dark eyes was tragedy. She shook her head.

"I can't, Michael. It isn't anything. I told you so."

The familiar line on Michael's jaw stood out. He spoke readily.

"There should be no secrets between husband and wife. Let me see that letter!"

It had become a matter of vital importance now. Michael was demanding a husband's rights, and Starr knew she must refuse him. She would not refuse him, no matter what happened. And he was probably thinking . . .

Suspicion clouded Michael's face. Suspicion edged his voice.

Starr did not dare imagine what he was thinking. But she was thinking—remembering. . . . That whispered conversation with Lance, and now came a mysterious letter which she would not explain. Did he think that she and Lance was communicating clandestinely, and only the chance of this letter having arrived at an inopportune time had betrayed the secret?

Dully Starr repeated, as she shook her head: "I can't!"

Michael did not ask her again. He simply got up from the table, leaving his breakfast half finished. He stalked out into the entry way and yanked his hat and coat from the hook. Starr heard the outer door bang behind him. It was the first time since their marriage that he had gone out of the apartment without kissing her goodbye.

The distraught bride paced her long living room in a mental torment. She paid no attention to Sapphira's perplexed comments, as if she had not heard her.

What was the meaning of this ominous note? Where had it come from? Who knew? It was like a direct answer to the fear which had been growing upon her slowly since the day her honeymoon ended.

In spite of her busy days, she had had long hours in which to brood, hours when she was alone. Michael, fired with the enthusiasm of providing for their future, had been working under double pressure. She had been thinking about the future, too, dreading her inexorable fate, planning, working for a home in which she and Michael should spend long years together. She might have known the futility of that!

Weeks had sped by rapidly. With a dazed feeling Starr now suddenly realized that it was many weeks—weeks that had flown into months—since the doctor had told her: "You won't live another six months."

Suppose his prophecy came true? Suppose the curse did fall upon her, as all along she had felt in the depths of her soul that it would? She had defied her destiny. Love—married. Was it to end now—her forbidden happiness?

Royal Robes

Royal School Of Needlework Engaged On Fine Embroidery

Thirty-five needlewomen have been chosen by Lady Smith-Dorrien, principal of the Royal School of Needlework, for the Coronation work which will be carried out at the school during the next three months. They will be engaged mainly on fine embroidery work on the canopy to be held over the King and Queen during the coronation on the King's robe, and probably on the Queen's dress and train.

The King's robe will be that which was made at the school in 1902 for King Edward VII, and it is to be sent to the school shortly to be thoroughly examined, and repaired if necessary. It is of cloth of gold, embroidered all over with colored emblems—red Tudor roses, green shamrocks, purple thistles and silver eagles.

The canopy will be made entirely at the school, of cloth of gold, with 18 raised silver eagles round the border. It will be lined with rich white satin, and supported at each corner by four slender silver poles. The Queen's dress will be made of white satin and will be embroidered all over in white and gold. Designs for the embroidery of the dress include Dominion and Colonial emblems.—London Times.

Yacht Will Cost Million

Challenger For America's Cup Is Building Luxurious Craft

The most luxurious yacht believed ever to have been built for a private owner will soon be launched for T. O. M. Sopwith, aircraft millionaire and challenger for the America's Cup. It is his 10th yacht in 10 years and will cost him $1,000,000, bringing his total outlay for yachts to $5,000,000.

Guests will fare well, with accommodation for 50, and such extra equipment as a tiled swimming pool, a gymnasium, a hospital, a ballroom and a cocktail bar. Some cabins will be decorated in modern style, some in period. There will be golf practice nets and sliding panels of sun ray glass on the promenade deck.

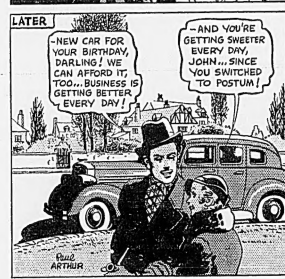

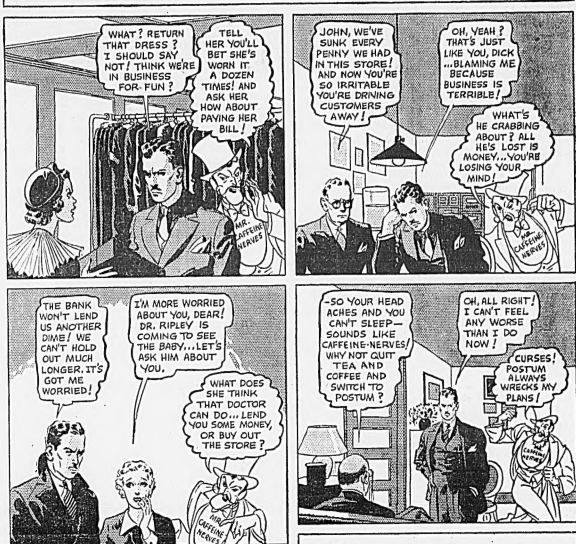

America's first insurance company was organized in 1735 at Charleston, S.C. A fire in 1740 destroyed half of Charleston and ruined the company.

ITCH

STOPPED IN A MINUTE . . .

Itching is a common ailment, caused by many things, such as, eczema, rashes, athlete's foot, eruptions, or other skin diseases. For quick and lasting relief, use cooling, antiseptic, liquid D. O. D. ointment. It is gentle and does not irritate skin. Clears, soothes and maintains—lastingly. A 35c retail bottle, at drug stores, proves it—or money back.

DICK GETS A NEW PARTNER

Of course, children should never drink tea or coffee. But do you realize that the caffeine in tea and coffee disagrees with many grown-ups, too? If you are bothered by headaches or indigestion, or find it difficult to sleep soundly . . . caffeine may be to blame. Why not try Postum for 30 days? Postum contains no caffeine. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It is easy to make, and costs less than one-half cent a cup. It's a delicious drink, too . . . and may prove a real help.

New Regulations Effective

Restrictions Placed On Germany's Restaurants Under Nazi Plan

Fewer dishes on the bill of fare, fewer table cloths in restaurants, and therefore less luxury, are some of the new measures to help Germany become self-sufficient in her food and raw material supply under the new four-year plan.

This was announced at the hotel and restaurant proprietors' meeting at Hanover recently. The new regulations became effective with the advent of the new year.

No bill of fare, even in the most expensive restaurants, is permitted to offer more than four different soups, 10 "dishes of the day," six grilled dishes of cold and four kinds of warm hors d'oeuvre, or 15 cold dishes such as cold cut, various special salads and cold fish.

Ordinary salads, vegetables, game and poultry may only be offered according to season. No stipulations have been made regarding cheese and dessert. Hot fish is the only major dish not subject to any restrictions, as the consumption of fish is to be encouraged.

Menus of the larger restaurants may offer no more than six major dishes, of which two must be fish, while menus of medium-sized restaurants may offer no more than three dishes, of which one must be fish.

Restaurant tables having marble or wooden tops, which can be cleaned or are not to be covered by table cloths. Saving can be made in laundry, it is said, without impairing either cleanliness or hygiene.

Cutlery, crockery and kitchen utensils in new restaurants are to consist of glass, porcelain or metals which are easily obtainable, in order to save silver, nickel and copper.

Industry For Alberta

News that Utah interests are planning a woollen mill for Magrath is further evidence that Southern Alberta is developing industrially in the direction of those industries for which it is best suited, states the Lethbridge Herald. A woollen mill in the centre of a district which produces 2,500,000 pounds of wool annually, and in an area where woollen clothing is a vital necessity of the residents, sounds logical.

A column of air one mile square extending from 50 feet to 14,000 feet above the earth contains, on an average for all seasons, about 25,000,000 insects.

Must Be Competition

Government Order Regulates The Sale Of Militia Horses

The government will tolerate no combinations in restraint of trade, nor secret covenants made to restrict free competition—even in the sale of militia horses. From time to time the noble steeds are found unfit for further service, or, for other reasons, have to be sold. In any case, the national defence department will see that fair's fair.

General order No. 2, tabled in the House of Commons by Ian Mackenzie, minister of national defence, makes this clear. It set forth that when one of these chargers has to be sold the sale has to be done by auction, and the C.O. of the regiment promoting the sale "will detail an officer to attend."

The reason is clear. The G.O. 2 continues that it will be the duty of this officer "to see that no combination exists to keep down the price. If such combination is apparent he will, after consultation with the auctioneer, postpone the sale."

The auctioneer gets a $5 fee if the sale price is $100, and five per cent if over. However, there might not be much in it for the auctioneer because, says the order, he "will pay for all the advertising."

Free Scholarship

Canadian Pacific Railway Offers Free Tuition To Apprentices

One free scholarship to the faculty of engineering or faculty of arts and science at McGill University is being offered by the Canadian Pacific Railway, subject to competitive examination, to apprentices and other male employees under 21 years of age, enrolled on the permanent staff of the company, and to minor sons of employees.

The company maintains 10 scholarships at McGill, the new one being to fill a vacancy resulting from the graduation of a previous winner.

Free tuition will be given as follows: Faculty of engineering; chemical, civil, mechanical, or electrical engineering; four years' tuition on senior matriculation, or five years' tuition (including one year in the faculty of arts and science) on junior matriculation; architecture; five years' tuition in the school of architecture, faculty of arts and science; four years' tuition in the arts division, or the school of commerce.

Little Helps For This Week

Remember O Lord Thy tender mercies and Thy loving-kindness, for they have ever been of old. Psalm 25:6.

My Father I see and trust. The faithfulness displayed of old. I trust the love that never can grow cold; I trust in Thee.

Be not so much discouraged in the sight of what is yet to be done, as comforted in His good-will towards thee. It is true He has chastened thee with rods of sore afflictions, but did He ever take away his loving-kindness from thee, or did His faithfulness ever fall thee in the darkest night that ever befell thee? We call Him the God of our fathers, and we feel there is some stability at centre when we can tell our cares to one listening at our right hand and by whom their cares have been remembered and removed.

A Century-Old Pipe

A pipe 125 years old and carved out of three sections of elk's horn was found hidden in the crutch of the branches of an old tree cut down on a Yarmouth township farm, near Port Stanley, Ontario. The letters "J. Hall, 1811," are carved on the pipe.

The bankers of New York City were the first employees to go on strike in America. The strike occurred in 1741. In those early days strikers were treated as conspirators but convictions seldom were obtained.

PERENNIAL WHEAT IN CANADA

Plant breeders have developed a plant with the seed of ordinary wheat and the long lived roots of grass according to a news dispatch from Ottawa. They did it by cross breeding ordinary strains of wheat with agropyron, a perennial grass closely akin to the common couch grass of Eastern Canada and the crested wheat grass of Western Canada. About half an acre of it representing many different crosses and varieties will be sown in experimental plots next spring. It is proposed that the new grass will be used to put soil on drifting farm lands in Western Canada. It is not anticipated that it will produce a commercial wheat. Last year Russia announced the production of a perennial wheat, but few details regarding it were made public.

STATES DROUTH AREAS TO GROW FINEST GRAINS

Experimental Farms
Head Describes Reclamation

MAKE PROGRESS

OTTAWA, Feb. 4 (C P)—Drouth areas of Western Canada will again produce Canada's finest quality of wheat, flax and other grains as a result of the reclamation and rehabilitation program now in progress, Dr. E. S. Archibald, director of experimental farms, forecast today in a paper read before the Canadian Institute of Surveying.

"Close contact with the progress of the present program and its possibilities," he said, "leaves one certain that this great tract of nearly 20,000,000 acres in the drouth area, with the aid of surveyors and scientists, governing bodies in control, and the farmers themselves, will again produce Canada's finest quality wheat, flax and other grains and at a cost comparable with that of any grain growing country in the world.

"This program which was started in 1935 has naturally undergone a very great revision in 1936 due to a much better knowledge of the problems involved," Dr. Archibald said.

Predict Marked Progress
"Even the latter year sees this program still in a formative stage, but with the result of recent conferences and negotiations and the provinces themselves becoming more keenly alive to the seriousness of their responsibility and problems involved and the possibilities of the federal-provincial co-operative attack, the next two years will see a marked progress toward a final plan for land utilization of the different types of soil under different climatic conditions."

Dr. Archibald spoke of the various work involved in the program "At present," he said, "the great single disastrous effect of drouth is soil drifting, which cuts off the growing crop and on poorer thinner soils leaves only an unproductive, infertile sub-soil, the good top soil having been blown into coulees or piled up and otherwise lost."

Dominion experimental farms and some 41 district experimental substations were studying every method of control of soil drifting.

No Single Method Successful
"No single method has been found successful, but a combination of strip farming, maintaining the stubble and trash near the surface, and in some cases the use of fall-sown cover crops, has definitely controlled soil drifting wherever there was adequate moisture for the germination of seed," he said.

The problem of regressing deserted and dangerously drifted lands in some farming areas and also in the range was receiving every increasing attention. He reported excellent progress has been made in soil survey work by universities. Water develop-

FARMER INDIVIDUALISTS

In the early stages of the Wheat Commission investigations I said that I wondered whether a farmer was an individualist, because he was a farmer, or whether he was a farmer because he was an individualist. The latter sort of individualism in this country which is tending inevitably towards some form of collectivization will be the primary industries. Perhaps no you, but certainly your children or your grandchildren are going to be faced with the choice between being individualists with comparatively long hours and probably comparatively poor standards of living, or being units in a more closely organized system of agriculture whereby you will be able to enjoy at least approximately the same benefits as those enjoyed by industrial workers upon larger units of production."—Sir Herbert Goss in the Australian Primary Producer.

The Hawaiian Islands have a species of orchid which lives from 50 to 100 years.

Eight in place of six years has been fixed at least approximately the period of compulsory education.

ment has also been one of the major activities in many districts.

Other activities allied with this work involved tree planting home shelter belts, stimulating agricultural extension work, regressing of deserted lands, intensive research in weed control in a manner which will not stimulate soil drifting, and reestablishment of seed production of high quality through the drouth areas.

A Healthful, Tasty and Economical Food for Any Day in the Week

TUESDAY, Wednesday, Thursday or Friday... any day can be Fish Day... when you realize just how healthful, tasty and economical Canadian Fish and Shellfish can be. Healthy, because of their rich store of proteins, vitamins and minerals, iodine and other elements. Tasty, because of their easily digested and finely-flavoured meat. Economical, because Fish gives you full value in nourishment for every cent spent.

Serve Canadian Fish and Shellfish more often. Whatever way is most convenient... fresh, frozen, canned, smoked, pickled or dried... you get nourishment in its most delicious form... in prime condition from sea, lake or river, to your table.
